NEW YORK CITY WINE AND FOOD FESTIVAL CONTINUES ITS LEGACY WITH ITS 11TH ANNUAL FESTIVAL

The 2019 festival looks to once again bring top talent to educate palates and entertain in high style

New York City: Thursday, October 10th, 2019

Starting today, October 10th, 2019, the New York City Wine & Food Festival begins the first of its four-day span of festivities. Join fellow foodies and celebrity chefs from the Food Network and Cooking Channel in any of over one-hundred events hosted by the festival. With over five-hundred chefs, two-hundred sponsors & partners, and over fifty-thousand attendees, NYCWFF is one event you won't want to miss.

Whether it be intimate dinners, pier parties, culinary demonstrations, hands-on classes, or family fun, festival goers are sure to have a good time. NYCWFF founder Lee Brian Schrager said the following about the festival, "If you love food, if you love wine, if you love spirits, if you love Food Network, if you love Cooking Channel this is where you gotta be. You have talent and you have food and it comes together under one big roof. This is a gathering of some of the best chefs, great music, and seriously some of the best eats you'll ever get."¹

For immediate release, 10/10/19 to Newsday

Proceeds from the festival will go towards the fight to end hunger by way of donations to Food Bank For New York City and No Kid Hungry®, so you can be sure that your entry fee is well spent.

Tickets are available online now at <https://nycwff.org/events/>, or you can purchase in person by visiting our Box Office located at 55th and 12th Ave, Thursday through Sunday, 9am-9pm.

About NYCWFF: NYCWFF is the largest wine and food festival in New York City with more than 100 events! Widely recognized for its tastings in homage to America's favorite foods, intimate dinners with world-recognized chefs, parties that just won't quit, hands-on classes/educational seminars, wine tastings and more - NYCWFF seeks to do it all. Over 50,000 passionate foodies sip, swirl and savor world-class cuisine, wine and spirits served up by the industry's top players.
